

“I have not known Bill long, because I am much younger than him, but I have learned there is no one who can get me to talk to myself like Bill can . . . To my knowledge, Bill is the only one to ever use the word “Dogmata” in the title of an economic article (“Quit Lying and Teach the Controversies: There Are No Dogmata, Laws, Rules or Standards in the Science of Economics,” MEA presidential address and article in the American Economist) . . .” Richard A. MacDonald, Senior Advisor for Program Development, Council for Economic Education

“I am one of those poor souls who has coauthored multiple times with Bill . . . and I hope to continue to do so . . . ,” William Greene, Toyota Motor Corporation Professor of Economics, Stern School of Business, New York University

“When I became Chair, I was warned of this unnamed guy who wrote provocative daily emails. His name was never spoken but his identity was well known . . . But then when I became chair, these e mails never materialized. So who knows, perhaps these cranky e mails were never sent, or the guy mellowed.” Gerhard Glomm, professor and Chair, Department of Economics, Indiana University
